BO BO

in The Forest of Forgetting

BOBO, THE CLOWN WHO LIVES IN BLUNDERLAND, IS CARRYING HOME A BIRTHDAY CAKE FOR ONE OF HIS FRIENDS. YES, IT'S TEENY ELEPHANT'S BIRTHDAY. THAT'S TEENY FOLLOWING BOBO AS THEY START FOR HOME THROUGH THE FOREST OF FORGETTING.

AS THEY ENTER THE FOREST, THEY MEET MR. TWIGG, THE WATCHMAN. "WHAT ARE YOU CARRYING?" HE ASKS.

"I DON'T REMEMBER," SAYS BOBO.

"HMMM," HMMMS MR. TWIGG. "IT SAYS HAPPY BIRTHDAY. WHY?"

"I FORGOT," REPLIES BOBO.

BUT TEENY HASN'T FORGOTTEN BECAUSE ELEPHANTS NEVER FORGET. SO HE TUGS AT BOBO TO REMIND HIM.

"MY GOODNESS," SAYS BOBO, "WHO ARE YOU? IN FACT, WHO AM I?"

POOR TEENY IS FRIGHTENED. OFF HE RUSHES THROUGH THE FOREST TO GET HELP.

HE RUNS TO BOBO'S HOUSE WHERE GUESTS ARE WAITING FOR THE BIRTHDAY PARTY. SITTING IN THE GARDEN ARE MR. MIXUP WHO GETS EVERYTHING MIXED UP, AND JOHNNY SMARTY WHO THINKS HE'S SMART, AND THE ROSE GIANT. "LOOK," SHOUTS THE ROSE GIANT, "HERE COMES THE BIRTHDAY BOY. BUT WHERE'S BOBO?"

QUICKLY, TEENY TELLS THEM ABOUT BOBO FORGETTING EVERYTHING IN THE FOREST. AND THEY ALL RUSH TOWARD THE FOREST TO FIND BOBO.

BUT WHEN THEY REACH BOBO, THE ROSE GIANT ASKS, "WHO IS HE?"

"I CAN'T REMEMBER HIS FACE, BUT I ONLY FORGET HIS NAME," SAYS JOHNNY SMARTY.

"TOO, ME," SAYS MR. MIXUP.

BOBO TRIES TO REMEMBER WHO HE IS. HE RUBS HIS HEAD WHILE HE THINKS. HE RUBS HIS HEAD SO HARD HE KNOCKS OFF HIS RAINBOW HAT, AND WHENEVER THAT HAPPENS...

...BOBO CAN'T SEE COLORS! THAT'S WHY THERE ARE NO COLORS IN THIS PICTURE. MAYBE, IF YOU GET YOUR CRAYONS, YOU CAN COLOR THE PICTURE BEFORE BOBO PUTS ON HIS HAT AGAIN.

SUDDENLY TEENY GETS AN IDEA! HE PICKS UP THE BIRTHDAY CAKE AND CARRIES IT OFF ON HIS TRUNK.

"THE WHO-IS-IT IS RUNNING AWAY WITH THE WHAT-DO-YOU-CALL-IT," CRIES BOBO.

"AFTER HIM RUN," SAYS MR. MIXUP.

AS SOON AS THEY LEAVE THE FOREST OF FORGETTING, THEY REMEMBER EVERYTHING. "HAPPY BIRTHDAY, TEENY," CALLS BOBO.

"HAPPY BIRTHDAY," SHOUT THE ROSE GIANT AND MR. MIXUP AND JOHNNY SMARTY.

AND INDEED, TEENY DOES HAVE A HAPPY BIRTHDAY.

THE SCARECROW'S JOKE

By GLADYS MARTIN

The poor scarecrow grew more and more unhappy standing in the berry patch. Then, all of a sudden, he felt something heavy in his empty pocket. After that, he was no longer unhappy

"O H, dear," Mr. Scarecrow sighed to himself, "why do I always have to wear somebody's cast-off clothes? If Farmer John would only dress me in a cowboy suit, I wouldn't mind standing here alone in the strawberry patch."

His faded old overalls were ragged around the bottom and they were much too short. They flapped about his thin legs when the wind swept down from the hills. His coat had lost all of its buttons except one, and his hat was battered and worn. His straw-colored hair showed through a hole in the crown.

"Well, anyway," Mr. Scarecrow thought, "this coat is better than the one I wore last year. It has nice, big pockets without holes."

He was happy thinking about the pockets without holes until he remembered that he had nothing to put in them. "Of course, I don't need pockets," he said sadly. "I never have any money or handkerchiefs or pieces of string. I don't have anything, and I don't do anything. I just stand here and frighten birds away from the strawberries."

Mr. Scarecrow felt more and more sorry for himself. His arms hung limply at his sides. But soon he cheered up when a little boy ran into the berry patch. "Here comes Tommy to pick strawberries. I hope he doesn't drop too many on the ground."

Mr. Scarecrow grew quite excited. His arms waved wildly in the wind. "Be careful, Tommy! You are wasting berries!" he cried as loudly as he could. "It's no use. I can't scare Tommy. No matter how hard I try, he only laughs and goes right on eating some of the berries he picks and dropping the rest on the ground. He's so careless!"

Then, as Tommy left the berry patch, Mr. Scarecrow had an idea. "Maybe he drops berries on purpose. When Farmer John put me out here, I heard Tommy tell him that the birds ate bugs and worms and only a few berries. But Farmer John said they ate more berries than bugs, and he wanted me to chase them away."

Mr. Scarecrow was sorry for the birds. He knew they liked berries, but his job was to scare them away. So, when the wind blew, the birds seldom came near the berry patch because then Mr. Scarecrow waved his arms wildly and tried hard to do what Farmer John wanted him to do.

Sometimes, when the wind forgot to come down from the hills, little gray sparrows and fat red-breasted robins pecked away at the bugs or kicked up the dirt to uncover fat worms. Now and then, they took a bite from a ripe, juicy berry and looked saucily up at Mr. Scarecrow as if to say, "Well, what are you going to do about it?"

One day, when the wind wasn't blowing, he woke up from a nap and felt something strange in one of his pockets. He bent down to look. And what a happy surprise he found!

Every day after that he kept looking in the pocket. The surprise was still there. But soon Mr. Scarecrow began to worry. What would happen if Farmer John or Tommy discovered the surprise?

As the days passed and nobody discovered his secret, he felt better and almost forgot to worry. Then one morning his pocket felt different. He looked inside.

"What a joke!" he chuckled. But suddenly he stopped laughing. "Oh, oh! Here comes Tommy's big gray cat!"

Mr. Scarecrow frantically waved his arms in the wind and tried to scare the cat away. But he came close, rubbed against Mr. Scarecrow's leg, and looked up inquiringly. Mr. Scarecrow glared at the cat. Finally, the cat turned away and walked slowly toward the house.

"Whew! That was a scare," Mr. Scarecrow said to himself.

He had hardly recovered from his fright when Tommy came running from the house. Just then a sparrow flew past Tommy and lit on Mr. Scarecrow's shoulder. She fluttered and chattered in great excitement.

Then the awful thing happened that Mr. Scarecrow had been dreading! Tommy walked over to him, looked into his pocket, jumped up and down in great excitement, and ran off to the barn. He came back in a minute with Farmer John.

"Oh, oh!" Mr. Scarecrow thought sadly as he watched the sparrow fly away.

Tommy showed his father what was in the pocket of the old coat. A broad smile appeared on Farmer John's face.

"Ha, ha!" Farmer John laughed. "That's a good joke on me! I gave you the job of scaring birds and you let them build a nest in your pocket!"

Then he said to Tommy, "I guess you're right, son. A scarecrow isn't much good at keeping birds away."

After Tommy and Farmer John returned to the barn, the mother sparrow came hurrying back. Mr. Scarecrow watched her drop fat worms into the mouths of the hungry baby birds in his pocket. "At last," he said happily, "I have something in my pocket."
